FDR Considers New Inspection Tours

Would Travel Areas Missed

Tells Press of Plans After Surprise Visits To War Establishments Along 8,745-Mile Route.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(INS)—The nation's military and naval high command was summoned to the White House today to give President Roosevelt latest reports on the progress of the war as the chief executive took up personal direction of the all-out effort after a two weeks' absence from his desk.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt's inspection of bustling war establishments around the edge of the nation worked out so well that he was giving earnest consideration today to another tour or two through the central and southeastern sections of the country.

He missed those areas while traveling 8,754 miles through 24 states in the last fortnight, paying surprise visits to private war plants and teeming army, navy and marine bases. But he had hopes of visiting them next spring to find out at first hand what they are contributing to the war effort.

He voiced that hope late yesterday, at a press conference at which he released details of his swing around America and gave his impressions of what he had seen.

The trip was conducted with all possible secrecy. Not a line was to be published about it until Mr. Roosevelt had returned safely to Washington.

It took him into plants turning out deadly war weapons and to army, navy and marine bases where men were being put into fighting trim. He saw production lines turning out endless streams of tanks, bombers, ships and ammunition.

The president got the idea, he said, that these arsenals were operating at 94 or 95 per cent of efficiency, that they were approaching the tremendous production goals set for them, and that employers and employes were doing their utmost to obtain maximum output.

He said he considered 94 or 95 per cent pretty darned good and added that it would be impossible to reach 100 per cent before the end of the year—because of all kinds of causes, little and big, the majority unpreventable.

He said he was going to ask for a great deal more in the next few months, indicating that the goals would be set higher than they were last January.

At that time he called for 60,000 planes in 1942 and 125,000 in 1943, 45,000 tanks this year and 85,000 next, 20,000 anti-aircraft guns in 1942 and 35,000 next June, 8,000,000 tons of shipping this year and 10,000,000 in 1943. The shipping totals later were boosted.

SILENCE RULES LOCKE OFFICE

Mayor 'Goes Into Shell' on Letter He Wrote About Ringside Operation.

Mayor W. J. Locke today had returned to his customary shell of silence, declining to discuss further with a News-Journal reporter his letter to the state liquor control board in which he denied knowing of any complaints against John P. Hergatt, Ringside cafe proprietor accused of selling liquor to a minor.

Harry E. Hawley, board chairman, revealed yesterday that Locke had submitted an unsolicited letter attesting that his office was unaware of any complaints against the operation of the East Third street resort.

Meanwhile, various citizens have called The News-Journal offices to register criticism of the mayor's action, one caller declaring he would personally call on the mayor to remind him that he had previously made complaints against the Ringside. Mayor Locke had

BLASTS TIRE BOARD POLICY, THEN RESIGNS

Kallmerten Says Farmers Not Getting Just Consideration on Applications.

CHARGES PLAN 'UNFAIR'

Declares Board's Attitude Not 'Conducive to Best Interests of All People.'

E. B. Kallmerten resigned today as a member of the county tire rationing board, explaining that he disagreed with the board over its policy toward the farmer and the board's new plan of handling applications.

A member of the board since it was set up, Kallmerten submitted his resignation to James Bailey, executive secretary of the board, and to Mayor W. J. Locke. It was through the mayor, he said, that he was appointed to the board.

Kallmerten said he felt "farmers are not getting the consideration they should have from the board in view of the work they are doing for the war effort."

Farmers have been placed in a classification which doesn't permit them to get as many tires and recaps as other war workers and persons in necessary services receive, he said.

"The attitude taken by you regarding the farmer is not sound or conducive to the best interests of all our people in the war effort," he said in his letter of resignation. "I am sure it was not the intention of our lawmakers when this legislation was set up to impose any such handicap on any class of workers.

"When we took over this job of tire rationing it was our opinion the judgment of our board was final . . . Now you propose to set up a plan whereby the board simply O.K.'s the decision of one individual. This permits too much chance for prejudice and favoritism.

"I am sure the board will agree with me that no fair and impartial judgment can be rendered by the

SHORT OF FUEL

NYC Has Coal For Only Seven Days' Operation.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE —(INS)— The New York Central railroad has on hand operating fuel sufficient for only seven days, R. E. Williamson, the road's president, revealed today.

Williamson was conferring with eastern Ohio coal operators over a shortage in railroad fuel to meet increasing demands on the railroads for war-vital transportation of freight and passengers. The shortage was said to be due in part to a falling off of nearly 40 per cent in the manpower of the supplying mines, due to demands of the armed forces and better-paying industries.

(In Washington the National Coal association reported that the production of coal for the week ended Sept. 26 was slightly below what it was in the corresponding week of last year.)

Family Reunion In Seattle

President Roosevelt chats with members of his family who met him while en route to Seattle during his secret tour of the nation's war industries. Boettiger, husband of Anna Roosevelt, is publisher of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

U. S. Subs Sink Five More Japanese Ships

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(INS)—The navy announced today that United States Army bombers and pursuit planes raided Japanese shipping and shore positions in the Aleutians five times in two days, damaging four enemy ships, two severely.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Whittling down Japanese sea power at an ever-increasing rate, the navy announced today that U. S. submarines in Far Eastern waters have sunk five more Nipponese vessels, including a large seaplane tender, damaged and probably sunk two cargo ships and damaged one large tanker.

The latest foray against Japanese supply lines to invasion points in the southwest Pacific boosted to 115 the number of enemy vessels sunk and damaged to date by U. S. submarines alone.

In addition to the large seaplane tender, the communique listed one large cargo-passenger ship, one large freighter and two medium sized cargo ships sunk.

In the damaged and probably sunk category were two medium sized cargo ships, while one large tanker was reported damaged.

To date American submarines have sunk 74 Japanese ships of all types while 19 were listed as probably sunk and 22 damaged for a total of 115.

Naval analysts have contended that these activities by American submersibles have played an important part in slowing down Japanese activities against American forces in the Solomons as well as the Aleutians.

They pointed out that in addition to sinking supplies and reinforcements en route to Japanese Pacific invasion points, these submarine attacks have prevented

'DIRTY' BANDITS GET $20,000 LOOT

Three Slug Bank Messenger, Escape With Cash.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — (INS) — Three roughly dressed bandits today slugged and robbed a bank messenger at Illiopolis of $20,000 cash which he was carrying to the Illiopolis bank to cash pay checks of war plant workers.

The three robbers, described as "dirty-faced and clad in overalls," parked their automobile near the postoffice. Two left the car and waylaid the messenger, knocking him down and making off with the money. They then fled in an automobile.

NO LUXURIES

Nelson Says We'll Have To Live on Plain Fare.

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson reiterated before the house agriculture committee today his belief that the nation will have enough food for the duration of the war. He warned, however, that it may have to forego "luxury foods."

Nelson was called before the committee in its investigation of farm labor and production problems, which several committee members have said must be solved if the nation is to avoid a critical food shortage.

Nelson said that his assurance of sufficient food supplies made in a speech before the American Legion convention at Kansas City recently was "a considered statement."

TRUCK THIEF IN BLACKOUT JAM

Carnival Employe Wrecks Vehicle, Gets Himself Caught.

FREMONT — (AP) — Running afoul a Fremont blackout, a carnival employe who wrecked a stolen truck was captured as he attempted to flee in an automobile he had taken in the darkness, police reported today.

They said the truck, stolen from a carnival showing at Port Clinton, was smashed during last night's blackout. The driver called a wrecking company, then stole the automobile of Joseph Shanahan, who had been forced to stop when lights were extinguished. The carnival worker was apprehended at nearby Clyde, and he was held for investigation.

HELD IN SUGAR DEAL

CUT DOMESTIC MEAT SUPPLY 20 PER CENT

OPA Order Assures Sufficient Supplies to Armed Forces, Predicts Rationing.

IN EFFECT TILL DEC. 31

Meat Packers Instructed To Reduce Deliveries To Conserve Supplies.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — The amount of meat for civilian consumption was cut nearly 20 per cent today by a government order intended to assure sufficient quantities for the armed forces and lend-lease.

A preliminary to the meat rationing program which will limit consumers to about two and a half pounds of meat by the end of the year, the order was issued to meat packers last night by the office of price administration.

Effective until Dec. 31, it specifies the amounts of beef, veal, pork, mutton and lamb that packers may distribute for civilian use.

Large packers slaughtering more than 500,000 pounds quarterly were ordered to reduce beef deliveries to 80 per cent of the amount distributed in the same period last year. Pork deliveries were cut 25 per cent and lamb and mutton, 5 per cent.

Smaller slaughterers were instructed to limit deliveries only to the amounts of their 1941 deliveries.

OPA's food requirements committee previously indicated veal would be cut to 80 per cent of the 1941 delivery. OPA, however, explained the armed forces did not plan to consume as large quantities as expected and consequently veal deliveries would be limited to the amount delivered in the same period last year.

The army and navy said 80 per cent of the "cutter and canner" grades of beef will be taken by lend-lease.

Lard, liver, hearts and kidneys are not restricted by the order, and while canned and stuffed meats are not subject to quota restrictions, they will be affected because the meat used in their preparation is subject to the restrictions.

Quota violators are liable to a year's imprisonment or $10,000 fine, or both, and suspension of the right to deal in meat or other rationed products.

House-to-House Attack Drives Nazis Backward

Russians Capture Another Settlement South of Stalingrad and Take Strategic Hill to North as Grim Defense Continues.

(By Associated Press)

MOSCOW—A Red army guard division of Stalingrad's siege-worn garrison was reported routing the Germans from house after house today in a counter-attack coupled with Soviet offensives outside the city, while invasion forces inched deeper into the northwestern suburbs.

The Germans pressed their own offensive from the northwest even as the Russians struck back along the fortified and blast-pitted streets of the Volga river industrial center.

The noon communique stressed defensive action within Stalingrad. It said Russian detachments accounted for 10 tanks of a large attacking force and slew 200 men, driving the survivors back to their initial positions.

The outnumbered fliers of the Red air force were declared to have brought down nine enemy planes.

Capture of another settlement south of Stalingrad and seizure of a strategic hill-top northwest of the city were attributed to Red army men in the day's official reports.

In the dislodgment of Germans from the height northwest of Stalingrad, the noon communique said, about 300 enemy officers and men were killed and 18 dugouts and blockhouses were destroyed.

Further tolls were reported levied upon enemy strength on the Mozdok, Leningrad and Novorossisk fronts. The communique said one Soviet unit wiped out about 1,500 German and Rumanian officers and men in three days of the battle of the western Caucasus southeast of Novorossisk.

This was the 39th day of the siege of Stalingrad.

Fresh Nazi divisions brought from other fronts rushed into the struggle, but the Russians said a decisive turn still was not sighted.

As evidence of the intensity of the battle, Izvestia reported the Germans rained 3,000 shells as well as many trench mortar projectiles against one narrow Russian salient.

The newspaper estimated the Nazi offensive in the northwestern suburbs gained only 200 or 300 yards, and said these cost the invaders heavy casualties. The fighting in that area was reported centered about a settlement where the Russians had slain 900 of the enemy in two days.

Inside the city, penetrated previously from the south and west, the Germans were said to be fortifying every house left standing. Dispatches said the invaders were felling the trees which made Stalingrad one of the garden cities of the Soviet Union to clear fields of fire for their guns.

Despite this work, however, the army newspaper Red Star said Russian troops ejected the Germans progressively from their footholds.

Red army tanks were reported blocking enemy tanks with a fierce drumfire of shells. Red air force fighters duelled with Nazi bombers.

Soviet troops both above and below Stalingrad were converting farm houses and cabins into defensive works, fighting off

PUSH: Allies Dig In After Egypt Gains, Ready to Go Again

(By United Press)

CAIRO—Imperial troops, having won and consolidated new positions on the Alamein front, are "preparing for the next round" in the battle of Egypt, Lieut. Gen. B. L. Montgomery, British commander, said today.

Imperial infantry, supported strongly by artillery and aircraft, advanced against enemy positions in the Manssib sector at the center of the battle line yesterday while American air force heavy bombers attacked an Axis embarkation point in Greece, British and American communiques announced.

It was the first British offensive action on the Alamein front since they stopped the German drive for Suez a month ago. The advance was made about midway between the Hemeimat peak, southern anchor of the line and the Ruweisat ridge at the north center.

There were no reports of fresh operations in the Manassib area today, but there was considerable air activity. A formation of Kittyhawk fighters shot down six German Junkers-87s and damaged many more planes in an enemy formation of Junkers and Messerschmitt-109s. There were no British losses.

The British planes forced the big Junkers to jettison their bombs on their own ground forces. Enemy aircraft sent three fighter-bomber attacks against British positions in the southern sector, but all were unsuccessful, it was announced.

An American headquarters communique said heavy bombers scored two direct hits on a large, supply-laden Axis merchant vessel at Navarino bay (Pylos), at the southwestern corner of Greece.

Several near-misses were reported by the American bomber crews who participated in the raid late yesterday afternoon. The planes flew several hundred miles into enemy territory to reach their objectives.

CLIMB: Aussies Push Way Up Range In Pursuit of Japanese

(By United Press)

GENERAL M'ARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia—Australian troops neared Menari, chief Japanese base on the Port Moresby side of the Owen Stanley mountains, today in the biggest Allied offensive operation in the New Guinea zone.

The Australian veterans of the Middle East, trained in jungle fighting, continued a deliberate advance in which wide-sweeping flanking parties kept pace with the central force in a movement intended to ensure that no enemy forces were overlooked.

Striking out from Nauro village, the second Japanese defense line they had taken, the Australians moved up the face of a 3,500-foot razorback ridge.

Dispatches indicated that they had reached the ridge and that today they were moving down the northern slope on Menari, 1,500 feet beneath them and four miles north of Menari.

In their steady progress over difficult terrain, the Australians continued to take quantities of enemy supplies, gathered for a drive on Port Moresby, including food, water, water-chlorinating apparatus and medical stores.

Douglas A-20 attack bombers and Bell Airacobra fighters supporting the Australian troops made four big bombing and machine-

The office in the basement of the courthouse will be open from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m. today, Saturday and Monday. The registration deadline for Mansfield residents is Monday night.

Transfers, or address changes, have kept the board clerks busy this week and registrations have shown a little gain, Clerk Philip Wolfe said.

New voters, those who have failed to vote at the last two November elections, women who have married since they voted last, citizens who were recently naturalized must register.

Workmans File Denial to Charge Of Dog Nuisance

Charges that dogs they keep at their home on Park avenue west are a nuisance because of their howling, barking, and whining are "neither actual nor factual but fanciful and extravagant," Misses Helen and Florence Workman and their father, C. H. Workman, said today in an answer to an injunction action filed against them several weeks ago in common pleas court.

Charles R. Callihan, Mansfield real estate dealer, filed the suit, asking for an injunction to restrain the defendants from keeping dogs at their home. Callihan owns an adjoining property.

In their answer, filed today by Attorney A. S. Beach, the Workmans contended they perform a community service as agents of the Angell Refuge society by taking stray dogs and finding homes

Ganyard Backs Bromfield But State AAA Chairman Differs

Agreeing with Author-Farmer Louis Bromfield who predicted Wednesday that there will be a critical labor shortage in 1943 because of the selective service system's plan of inducting men into the army, County Agent George B. Ganyard said today that all the part-time farm workers and the excess supply of labor have been drafted and if many more men are taken from farms, production will be curtailed.

Elmer Kruse, Ohio AAA chairman, however, took issue with Bromfield, who said food production on farms would not show an increase this year despite a prediction of Claude Wickard, secretary of agriculture, that there would be a sizeable gain.

"There has been a tremendous increase in food raising," said Kruse, according to dispatches to The News-Journal "Ohio has been well up among the states with the greatest increases in many crops."

Ganyard said he thought the

HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD—Another side of Hollywood:

Tom Reed, movie electrician, got a raise—temporarily—while I was talking to him. Tom is one of 2,231,000 earners in the U. S. A. who average between $60 and $70 a week.

Coons

Tom was making $1.46 an hour, union scale, until his chief electrician beckoned him to operate a knobby contraption called a dimmer. As soon as he touched the instrument, regulating the flow of light on Bette Davis' profile as she went through a shipboard meeting with Paul Henreid, Tom began drawing $1.71 for awhile.

TOM'S days are full of little surprises and uncertainties like this. His chief lets him know each evening whether he's to work next day, and where. Yesterday it was "some airplane picture on Stage 5"—he thought it might be Errol Flynn's—and today it was Bette Davis' film. He didn't know the title was "Now, Voyager," but was interested when I told him.

He operates lamps, wind-machines, dimmers, anything electrical. Working almost every day, and some overtime, he now averages between $3,000 and $3,900 a year.

Like most movie workers—and the whole industry — he knows feast and famine. This is feast. In 1932 was famine. That whole year he did not work a day.

Tom Reed is lean, active, and 65. He has been a movie electrician since 1918, when the climate brought him west after 17 years with a St. Louis telephone company. "I can go places any young man can," he says—including the catwalks which range at dizzy heights over the sets.

His first movie job at the old Brunton studios, where the Talmadge sisters, Marion Davies and Louise Fazenda were among the stars, paid him 87½ cents an hour. Now he owns his own home in Burbank—eight rooms on a big lot—and a summer cottage in the San Jacinto mountains. Thrift, and a knack for trading did it.

He has been married to one wife, 40 years. He met her at a military dance when he was in the Missouri National Guard, and popped the question three years later. They have two children, three grandchildren. Tom's wife, widowed daughter, and granddaughter do the housework and cooking.

HE HAS never been to Ciro's or any movie nightclub. His idea of a party is a home affair—big dinner, drinks in moderatoion—for friends. When living costs were rising, he refused to be upset. "We've got to eat," he told Mrs. Reed. He pays union dues of $9 per quarter.

He sees the stars off-guard, sees them "blow up" occasionally. Some are friendly (he mentioned Bette Davis, Flynn, Fazenda) and others don't bother, which is all right by him: "They live in a different world, and mine's good, too."

HEAD OF UNION WANTS U. S. TO RUN RAILROADS

Whitney Charges Lines Now Being Run in Interest of Manipulators.

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND—The government should take over operation of the railroads immediately to avert a prospective breakdown of the nation's transportation system, said President A. F. Whitney of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen today.

"The quicker the railroads are taken over the better it will be, in my opinion, for the whole country," said Whitney, commenting on an article titled "Railroads—The Next Bottleneck," in the October issue of the Brotherhood's magazine.

"The president should put in charge not only an expert in financing, but one who is capable of seeing that they're operated efficiently and for the people—not in the interests of the manipulators," Whitney asserted.

Noting WPB Chief Donald M. Nelson's report that war production increased eight per cent in August over July, the Brotherhood president said further increases, "which the country wants, will hasten a breakdown of carriers by rail. The question of when that might happen is problematical.

"There is bound to be a shortage of motive power and rolling stock," due partly to increased business and partly to "the fact each railroad is operating as a unit. Many cars are being moved empty under their individual operation, when they should be carrying a load.

"Government operation," Whitney continued, "is not only advisable but imperative. There is a shortage of manpower on many railroads due to their aristocratic attitude in refraining from employing breakmen, firemen and yardmen who are over 27 years of age unless they have college or university educations.

"The railroad managements are carrying on under the same philosophy of the past 50 years, failing to recognize the need of innovations not only in financing but operations," he said, "and the carriers have practically abandoned safety regulations and sacrificed speed of war materials in their abandonment of carload-limit legislation."

He expressed agreement with the article, written by Wellington Roe, which concluded "only immediate governmental action can prevent a transportation breakdown."

OPENS DEMS' BID FOR VOTES

McSweeney Pledges Division of State Surplus, Hits Republican Platform.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—With a promise to "spread around" the state's $20,000,000 treasury surplus if he is elected, John McSweeney of Wooster, Democratic gubernatorial condidate, last night swung his campaign into Franklin county.

At a meeting of about 750 Democratic workers, McSweeney declared that the GOP state platform was short because "they dare not refer to the past and cannot point to the future . . . their platforms have been repudiated too often in the past."

"If had a record like the present administration, I, too, would want to write my platform in 500 or 600 words and smooth it over with little, meaningless words," he said.

He said that the Democratic party had "something to be proud of" and "couldn't confine our platform to 500 or 600 words."

McSweeney criticized Gov. John W. Bricker for refusing to call a special legislation session to correlate federal and state election laws and permit soldiers to vote.

He said the GOP state administration had resorted to "double taxation" to maintain the state surplus.

"If I am elected this money will be spread around," he said. "We'll have our great production areas protected in every possible way."

ROOSEVELT, GARNER EXCHANGE GREETINGS ON TEXAS TOUR

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — The paths of Franklin D. Roosevelt and John Nance Garner, which led both to national political leadership in 1933 crossed again in the little Texas town of Uvalde during the president's nation-wide inspection trip.

Their hastily-arranged meeting in the president's railroad car on Sept. 27 was the first since 1940, when Garner as vice president, broke with Mr. Roosevelt over the third term issue.

"Cactus Jack," in his familiar garb of battered hat and rumpled suit, boarded the president's car during a brief stop of the special train in the Texan's home town.

"God bless you—I'm glad to see you," was Garner's greeting for the president.

And, as the two shook hands amid hearty laughs, the president replied:

"Gosh, you look well."

Mr. Roosevelt asked:

"How are things going down here? I hear people are making a lot of money."

And Garner responded:

"They're a hundred per cent for you. They're well physically and financially. They're getting along fine."

His people, the former vice president said, are more in the war effort than are those in Washington. The president asked how they felt about his cost of living program.

Garner assured the president that Texas farm people are "for" the farm parity stabilization program and asserted that persons opposing it are "not real farmers."

They parted with Garner's "Goodbye and God Bless You." The president asked that his regards be conveyed to Mrs. Garner.

Garner told reporters that he wished the president "good health."

"Give him good health," he said, "and you get all the balance."

Their chat lasted but five minutes.

Still spry, 'though he is now in his seventies, the beloved ex-vice president walked back to his old roadster, parked at the Uvalde station, and drove off by himself as the presidential train pulled out.

START PROJECTS

Workmen Begin Bartley, Glen Beck Lane Paving.

Laying of asphalt pavement on Bartley avenue and Glen Beck lane was scheduled to start this afternoon, both projects being carried on in alternate operations.

City Engineer W. C. Statler was advised that crews of the Mansfield Asphalt Paving company would start work today. Concrete bases had been completed on these thoroughfares before work was halted several weeks ago when the government froze all bituminous materials. Releases on sufficient asphalt to complete city jobs were obtained recently.

After these programs are finished the paving company will move its equipment to out-of-the-city jobs for a month, Statler said he doubted if the resurfacing of Glessner avenue can be completed until the return of warm weather next spring.

"Council must pass legislation in the winter if they expect such jobs to be carried out during the warm months, "Statler declared. Action authorizing these three projects was taken last spring and early summer.

Up and Down THE STREET

Richland county school superintendents and athletic coaches were told officially today that they can't use school buses to transport football and basketball teams or pupils to games in other communities. School officials were expecting the order, however, and have already started making preparations to take the teams in private cars. The fans will have to find their own means of transportation or stay at home, County Supt. Boyd Robinson said. The order was issued by the state office of the OPA. Bus owners who use their vehicles for unnecessary purposes will not be eligible for new tires or recaps, the order said.

The long golden hair of a 12-year-old Mansfield school pupil has gone into the making of precision instruments for the nation's war effort while the donor, Mary Elizabeth Hieber, eighth grade student at Johnny Appleseed school, has a certificate of acknowledgement of her service. Fourteen inches of Mary Elizabeth's blond braids were sent to the Julian Friez company at Baltimore, Md., division of the Bendix Aviation corporation, and the certificate came from that organization. Other potential donors wishing to do likewise must take into consideration that only straight blond hair untouched by chemicals, hot irons and permanent waving machines will be accepted. And the hair must be 14 inches long. The first young miss from Mansfield to make such a donation is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milo W. Hieber, State Route 39.

Among the many persons who do not agree with the contention of Pennsylvania Public Utility Commissioner Richard J. Beamish that football coaches should be fired and the sport suspended for the duration of the war is Coach Paul Snyder of the Mansfield high school Tygers. "They want young men to be hard and tough for army service," said Snyder today, "and I don't know any better way to harden and toughen them up and prepare them for physical combat than football."

FDR REPROOF SPURS ACTION ON MEASURE

Senate, House Conferees Seek Agreement on Bill To Control Prices.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON — (U.P.)— The house today sent the pending anti-inflation bill to conference with the senate and unanimously suspended its rules to permit consideration of the conference report later this afternoon.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Senate and house conferees struggled to compose by noon today an acceptable set of directives for President Roosevelt's price and wage fixing regulations against inflation, so that a finally-passed bill could be sent to the White House tonight.

They worked under the impetus of a reproof from the president, who pointed out on his return from a cross country trip last night that during the economic crisis of 1933 it was the normal thing for congress to pass needed legislation in 24 hours or in a couple of days.

In his Labor day message of Sept. 7, Mr. Roosevelt demanded the legislation by Oct. 1, declaring he would act if congress didn't.

Contrasted with the purely domestic crisis of 1933, the president told his press conference, today's situation threatened the very existence of the nation and it was important to have speed.

Before the laboring lawmakers was the senate substitute for a house bill, with altered provisions for farm price controls and other changes.

With house farm leaders apparently ready to accept the senate provision that "adequate weighting" be given to the cost of farm labor in the establishment of price ceilings, the chief point of difference was a proposal to place a floor of 90 per cent of parity under farm prices.

Both the house and senate bills provide for loans on the major farm commodities at 90 per cent of parity, instead of the present 85 per cent.

Senator Brown (D.-Mich.) said he could "safely say that the bill as it passed the senate will be acceptable in substance by those in charge of the measure in the house." This statement followed an informal conference yesterday, in which senate Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky said some progress toward an agreement was made.

Maj. Gen. J. Lawton Collins, commanding the south sector of Oahu Island made the award.

Honors were conferred also on other army men for various acts of bravery and for meritorious service.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

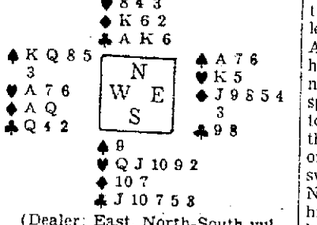
"The Authority on Authorities"

BLOCKING THE ENEMY

Unblocking your own suit, so that the ranking card may thus be placed with the longer holding, is one factor in good play. The reverse of it—blocking the suit of the opponents—is equally vital at times. Holding up your own high card in it, even when a finesse is tried which you can win, may upset the entire apple cart of the enemy.



(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♦	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 NT

The heart K was East's reason for passing the 3-No Trumps instead of preferring 4-Spades. When North led the heart 8, the K was called by West, since he wanted to finesse the diamond Q, in the hope of catching a doubleton K. North won that finesse—a costly error. After he returned the heart 4 to the A, West cashed the diamond A, led to the spade A, ran four more diamonds and two more spades to score an extra trick.

Just see what would have happened if North had let the diamond Q finesse win. West could have played his A then, but that would not have set up the suit. With only the spade A as an entry to dummy, a second entry would have been needed after driving the diamond K out. Seeing this, West shouldn't even have tried for the rest of the diamonds, but should have sought a break of spades, which would have failed, so that he would have been set two tricks.

North got his chance to make that mistake in play, however, only because West had made a worse one. The contract would have been airtight, plus an extra trick, if he had won the heart lead with the A, led the diamond A and then the Q. Even if North held up his K on that, it would not have done any good, as the spade A was one entry to dummy to use a diamond lead driving out the K, and the heart K was a second one to run the suit. Even a switch to clubs would have done North no good, after winning with his diamond K, as he could not have led through West's heart Q.

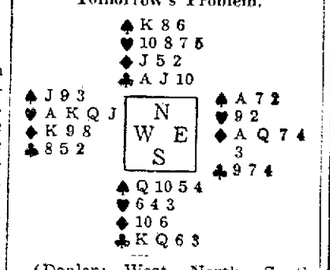
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: West. North - South vulnerable.)

What principle of winning bridge may be exemplified in somewhat exaggerated form by East on this deal if West first bids 1-Heart, East 2-Diamonds, West 3-Diamonds and North passes?

HOROSCOPE

For Saturday, October 3

THE SIDEREAL conditions encourage and favor constructive programs in all walks of endeavor, with the promise of advancement, promotion, preferment and the expanded finances and credits needful to put over ambitious and cherished plans, hopes and wishes. It is a propitious time to push such efforts in business, personal, domestic, social and cultural channels, with elders, friends and influential persons assisting. However there is need for keen vigilance against fradulent entanglements, legal tangles or deception.

Those whose birthday it is should grasp the opportunity for expansion and growth, with increase of prestige, popularity, standing and financial credit—all contributing to inaugurating ambitious and constructive programs, which should meet success and promote fortunes and good will among associates in business, domestic, social and public or philanthropic affiliations. Nevertheless there is definite danger of loss, theft, legal entanglements, misrepresentation, probably through writings, agents and the like. Beware these and safeguard all possessions and interests as well as reputation.

A child born on this day will have lofty ambitions and aspirations for place and prestige, which it should attain. However, it may suffer fraud, loss and duplicity, with writings or documents jeopardized by cunning and trickery.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I am as capable of jealousy as any normal woman, and the sight of Carolyn Brixton, with her arms around my husband's neck and her lips apparently seeking his, at first sent a wave of flaming anger over me. But common sense at once came to my rescue, and I appraised the scene at its right value.

"Need any help Dicky?" I asked with amusement in my voice.

"I'll say I do," he said. "If you'll pull her affectionate, clinging arms from my neck, I can get a strangle hold on her, throw her back on the bed and tie her down, until Miss Whitlock gets here."

"Don't you touch me!" Carolyn choked, dropping her arms from Dicky's neck and making a flying leap back to her chair. "Oh, how I hate both of you!"

Carolyn's Acting.

"I didn't think I'd need to release you," I said smiling. "Her stage effects were good but the scene fell flat."

Dicky gave a low, expressive whistle.

"I hadn't thought of that angle," he said. "In my innocence, I believed the gal was trying to gain sympathy from a guy she sized up as a gullible masculine goof. She thinks she's simply irresistible, you know."

"She was trying to get your sympathy," I said, "but she was also trying something else."

"I get it—fully," Dicky said with a laugh. "She thought what you saw would send you into a jealous rage, of which she might take advantage."

Colossal Conceit.

"Well, you've got to slip it to the gal. She'd be a natural to write those true confession things. Her only trouble is her colossal conceit. If she can ever realize that men aren't standing in rows, waiting to be cut down by her charm, somebody might be able to make a real woman of her. And to think that she is a child of the same parents as Ronald! I think her identification disk must have been switched at the hospital."

"Miss Whitlock ought to be here any second," I said quietly. I think Dicky caught the warning in my voice, for he stopped baiting the girl, and I speculated on a theory Dicky's last words had brought up.

I never had seen Helena Brixton's first husband, father of her two children, but I had heard from Lillian that he was so thoroughpaced a scoundrel that Helena had been glad to give her children legally the name of Samuel Brixton, whom she married after her first husband deserted her and his infant children.

Possibly, I mused, Carolyn had inherited some traits of her father which missed Ronald altogether. Might not this be the key to her incomprehensible conduct?

Miss Whitlock's entrance cut short my speculations. She took one look at Carolyn, who had buried her face in her hands at Dicky's diatribe, and spoke briskly.

"As I understand it, you don't want her blindfolded until after we get into the car?"

"That is right," I told her. "My father will tell you when he wants it done."

"You people are ready to go. I take it?"

"All ready," I said.

"And so are we," she told me. "I have Carolyn's hat, coat and overnight bag with me. Stand up, Carolyn, and I'll help you with your hat and coat. Or would you prefer to put them on yourself?"

"Give them to me," Carolyn said hoarsely, reaching out her hands. "Don't any of you dare to put your hands on me."

67 ARRESTED IN SEPTEMBER, POLICE REPORT

Fines and Costs For Traffic Violations Total $1,087, Chief Reports.

With 67 arrests reported for September, fines and costs for traffic violations during the month totaled $1,087.30, according to a report submitted today by Police Chief Thomas M. Bell to Mayor W. J. Locke.

In September, 1941, there were 885 traffic tickets issued as compared to 306 for the same calendar period this year. During last month, 48 motorists were arrested on speeding charges and eight for unsafe operation as the traffic department inaugurated a more rigid enforcement of speed zone regulations.

In the general report, Chief Bell's summary shows arrests of 126 men and 14 women during September. Outstanding case was the arrest of a youth who admitted theft of around 35 auto tires and wheels from cars parked on city streets or in defense plant lots or garages, together with the arrest of a filling station manager who purchased the stolen equipment.

More than 20 tires and wheels were recovered through the efforts of Clare W. Kyler, assistant identification officer, and Plainclothesman Herbert G. Palmer.

During the month there were 53 traffic accidents, causing injury to 10 persons but no fatalities.

Meal costs for jail prisoners during the period totaled $67.47, as compared to $126.27 for September of last year.

One murder was recorded for September. Two suicides were investigated and one railroad crossing fatality recorded.

Books For Children

(Available at Mansfield Public Library)

Boys who have been to camp and also like mountain stories will be interested in two new titles in the Mansfield Public library's children's department.

CAMP HERO, by B. J. Chute—When Yip Bailey returned to his favorite camp he found a spirit of bitter rivalry which threatened the goodwill of two cabin mates. Yip knew that Red and Duke were finding it difficult to be equally good at all the things they did in camp but he couldn't tell them directly how to regain their good will. The story shows how the boys became best friends.

HILL LAWYER, by Hubert Skidmore—Jim Martin, a penniless young lawyer, went into the Blue Ridge mountains to help the Stoney Fork people to clear the titles to their property from the treachery of mining and lumber companies. He learned very early what law in the hills was like and the cool, quick decisions of York Allen, the young doctor of the author's previous books, help him to expose the outlaw band of swindlers.

Suit Filed in Fatal Crash at Erie Underpass.

A suit for $25,495 damages for the death of Arthur B. Ensminger of Bucyrus, in a traffic accident at the Erie underpass west of Mansfield last Dec. 5 had been filed today in Richland county common pleas court by his widow, Mrs. Edith Rae Ensminger, administratrix of his estate.

The action is against the Motor Cargo, Inc., of Akron, owner of one of the three vehicles which figured in the crash in which three persons were killed.

Ensminger had stopped his car at the scene of an accident in the underpass when the defendant's truck crashed into his car from behind, fatally injuring him, the petition states. The plaintiff is represented by Attorney Edward J. Myers of Galion.

'We've Got 'Em Worried Now,' Jubilant Cards Declare

Sport Podge by REX HESS

Pin boys at the Colony bowling alleys are now 100 per cent in the 10 per cent club.

And it was their own idea.

Any employer would hesitate to ask the help, making as little as pin setters in a bowling alley, to set aside 10 per cent of their wages toward the war effort and the purchase of defense bonds and stamps.

Al Vogel, manager of the Colony lanes, admits that the idea never even occurred to him.

So you can imagine Al's surprise when the boys walked up to him and demanded that he deduct 10 per cent of their pay each week, buy defense stamps with the money, and turn the bonds over to them when enough stamps had accumulated.

The Colony alleys now have 18 to 20 boys working regularly, and can use more, both for pin setting and the 10 per cent club.

Not so long ago this country professed to be worried about the "youth problem." It should worry, with boys like these.

* * *

Note to John Simpson junior high gridders:

If you're going to play that game this fall with Galion junior high, it might not be a bad idea to start pointing now.

Galion romped over Bucyrus the other afternoon, 34-0, scoring 13 points in the first period, 7 in the second, 7 in the third, and 7 in the fourth.

I watched Coach Bob Shaffer sendin, his Galion lads through blocking drills one afternoon, and, putting the question of ability to the one side, I've never seen a bunch of kids having more fun bowling each other over.

Call it sabotage, if you want to, but is was entirely unintentional.

Assistant Coach Augie Morningstar of Massillon high school cluttered up the nation's wartime transportation facilities for a 2,000-mile tround trip to Lincoln, Neb., last week, for nothing at all.

Augie made the trip to scout the Lincoln team which plays at Massillon tonight. But it rained, and the Lincoln opponent, Sioux City, Ia., refused to play.

Lil Augie boarded the choo-choo 'rain
And rode to Lincoln to watch the rain.

Dear Podge:

Where were you in 1920? That, you know, is the year the Clevelands did win the pennant and the World Series to boot.

I saw one game of that series—the one in which Elmer Smith hit a home run with the bases full, and Bill Wambsganss pulled an unassisted triple play.

But I can't tell my grandchildren about it, because I haven't any, either.

—RDL.

Streaks Seeking Revenge

Strong Forward Wall Outweighs Tyger Line.

A HUSKY bunch of Blue Streaks, smarting under early defeats of 19-0 and 21-0 by strong Collinwood and Lorain gridiron machines, and aching for revenge for the 32-0 lacing handed them a year ago by an undefeated Mansfield high school eleven, lies in wait tonight for Coach Paul Snyder's Tygers at Sandusky stadium, seeking revenge.

Sandusky, with a strong line still undented by Lorain's powerhouse, has the equipment with which to gain revenge tonight. The line will outweigh Mansfield's forward wall something like 18 pounds per man.

* * *

Lorain scored all of its 21 points in the second quarter against Sandusky when the Streaks' pass defense fell apart. A 24-yard pass in the end zone accounted for the first touchdown, the second came on a 3-yard smash off tackle after passes had carried the ball down the field, and the third resulted from a pass interception and a 47-yard run.

In the fourth quarter Sandusky drove down to the Lorain 5-yard line where it lost the ball on an incomplete pass on fourth down.

Most important development of the game was the fact that Coach Wally Glenwright's Streaks showed vast improvement over their play in the opener, and the fact that Sandusky held Lorain scoreless in the last half after that wild second period gives some indication of the strength and fighting spirit of this Sandusky team.

Mansfield tonight will have to depend on its running and aerial attack to gain ground against the Streaks, and Coach Snyder has given the boys plenty of practice this week in both departments, as well as in pass defense and in holding on to the ball. Fumbles proved entirely too costly a week ago against Elyria.

Whether or not Bill Lewis, veteran end and punter, will be able to play for the Tygers tonight was still a question today. If he stays on the sidelines, Gene Hetler probably will be moved to end with Joe Parry taking Hetler's guard position, and Dick Butterfield nominated for the kicking chores.

Probable starting lineups:

Mansfield	Pos.	Sandusky
Burrage	l.e.	Alexander
Snyder	l.t.	Anders
Goettle	l.g.	Fox
Snowden	c.	J. Babcock
Hetler	r.g.	Ebert

Schmidt	r.h.	Ernst
D. Musille	f.b.	Freitas

CUBS DEFEATED TWICE TRY AGAIN AT NIGHT

CHICAGO—(AP)—The Chicago Cubs are getting the same sort of treatment from the White Sox in the 1942 city series that they suffered last year—they're having difficulty winning.

Defeated in the first two daylight games, the Cubs left their home park to meet their south side rivals in Comiskey park tonight in the third encounter of the four of seven series. Last year the Sox finished the series in four straight. The Sox won yesterday, 9-5.

Teams Remain Undefeated

BUCKEYES PRONOUNCED FIT, READY TO GO

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Ohio State university today had completed all preparations for tomorrow's western conference inaugural against Indiana university in Ohio stadium.

The Buckeyes were pronounced fit and ready for action by Team Trainer Ernie Biggs and the inexperienced and untested Bucks were definitely on edge as the "big moment" neared.

Rams Look for Real Ball Game

Rated Even Choice Against Orrville Club.

"There's no question in my mind," says Al Fendrick, coach of the Madison high school Rams, "but that tonight's game with Orrville at Madison field will be the best game on our home schedule."

* * *

Madison will be battling for revenge for two defeats in 1939 and 1940 in which Orrville ran the score up into the 30's both times. And Madison has yet to score a point on the Red Riders.

* * *

"The two teams appear about evenly matched," says the Wooster Record, "and a victory for Madison would surprise no one."

This statement is made in spite of the fact that Orrville has nine lettermen in its starting lineup, and boasts one of the better ball players of the Wooster area in Joe Yonto, running, kicking, passing, plunging fullback.

To which Fendrick retorts: "If we can keep our starting lineup on the field through most of the game, I believe we have a 50-50 chance."

Fendrick has realized that the biggest weakness of this year's Madison team is the lack of first line replacement, and he has been working for the past two weeks in an effort to develop his reserve material.

* * *

Madison tonight will depend on the accurate throwing arm of Harold Hammer to produce yardage when it is needed. Following a Galion-Madison practice scrimmage before the opening of the season, Coach Jim Lymper of Galion said: "We didn't look so good on pass defense, but I doubt if we run into many passers this season as accurate as that Hammer."

Probable lineup for tonight's game, scheduled at 8:15:

St. Louis Evens Up Series With Yankees

Teams Have Off-Day, Resume World Title Battle Tomorrow

By GAYLE TALBOT

EN ROUTE WITH WORLD SERIES TEAMS—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals in particular and National league in general felt that they at least had those "unbeatable" New York Yankees badly worried today as the two world series rivals rolled toward Yankee stadium and a resumption of hostilities tomorrow.

From the way the happy Cards were taking on over their 4-3 victory in yesterday's second game at St. Louis and the big plans they were making for taking the Yanks over the hurdle the next three days on their home grounds, anyone would have thought Billy Southworth's scrappy youngsters were at least a couple of games in front instead of merely having deadlocked the play-off at a victory apiece.

"We've got 'em plenty worried," one after another of the Red Birds chortled in the diner.

Ford Frick, National league president, attached great significance to the fact that McCarthy stalked out frequently to complain of decisions in yesterday's defeat, and that he was sore as a wet hen because George Kurowski's timely triple that scored the Cardinals' third run was ruled a fair ball.

"Ordinarily Joe doesn't leave that dugout three times a season," Frick insisted. "When he starts arguing the way he did yesterday you can bet he has something on his mind besides a baseball cap."

The Cards were inclined to think they had got in a jab on the Yanks that would bring important results in the remaining games. When Enos "Country" Slaughter dashed on to third after slugging his double off Ernie Bonham in the eigh

PASSING DREAM

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

(Copyright, 1942.)

CHAPTER X

It was a climax to be walking down the crowded street knowing that Jud was waiting outside a certain restaurant. It was a climax to pass a convenient mirror in a shop window which permitted her to see briefly that the small black hat had been put on, though hurriedly, at the proper angle and that her black dress with the pleated skirt was still good. It would be some time before she could buy any new clothes. It was a climax to be young and not alone in a city too busy and too important to be as hospitable as it had been in quieter times.

Jud was standing outside the restaurant. Wearing the tan polo coat with the collar turned up and a casual brown hat, he was smoking his pipe and looking, not for her, but thoughtfully into space.

She wanted to run—to run, to touch him, to put her arms around him and her face against his.

When he saw her he continued to stand still. Only his eyes, shaken from deep thought, followed her warmly as his mouth broke into its crooked smile.

"Going my way, lady?" he asked.

She smiled. "I don't care if I do." She was trembling.

"I'll take you into many strange places, lady."

"I don't care if you do, mister." She placed her hand on his sleeve. Oh, Jud . . ."

"Hello, darling."

"Hello, darling." She had never called anyone "darling" before.

"I think you're glad to see me."

"I've missed you, Jud."

"You'd—you'd better get used to missing me, darling. Let's go inside."

Get used to missing him? Her heart seemed to stop. She thought "I'll give you up with sadness and pride. That's what I told myself at Paula's. That's the promise I made myself and I won't go back on it. I'm equal to it. I'm brave for it. Aren't you, Jud? You won't discuss it. You're like the doctor who won't talk about the operation he's about to perform."

They sat in the dim light looking at each other.

He said lightly. "You're beautiful, Temple. Seems to me I've said that before. Seems to me I say to myself all the time at home and in the office . . . 'She has dark hair that turns up on the ends and soft skin with color in it and everything she feels and thinks you can see in her eyes. They're dark, too, and clear. You don't think much about her nose because there's nothing the matter with it; and her lips give me ideas . . . not very original ones, however . . .' This would be very silly conversation if we weren't making it." When she smiled, she said. "Oh yes, she smiles like a wise child."

"Have I told you about Jud?"

"No. Do tell me. Who is this guy Jud you're in love with?"

"Well, he wears clothes the way other young men would like to wear them . . . and his eyes think things other than the things he's talking about at the moment. Did I get that right?"

"Too right. I bother you a little, don't I? I'm not all black and white. Two and two don't make four."

"I think I know what it is. Why don't you enlist?"

"I probably shall. I've been thinking about it, too. I," he frowned and shook his head, "I was about to make a bad joke. I was about to say that it would let me escape from you. I'm afraid we can't joke about that. You're the most wonderful thing that ever happened to me."

"Even though I'm not the boss' daughter?"

"Yes, even though you are not."

"And even though you are not my last two years in college."

He smiled and said, "Tell me about your week-end with Paula."

When she told him, she added, "Jud, I think I've learned that just about the worst thing that can happen to you is knowing what you want—too late. Paula is like that. She'd like to live there; she'd like that kind of simplicity and respectability . . . but it's too late. She waited too long. She lived too much. She's had too many climaxes."

He looked at her soberly. "I hope that one of these days you don't take me apart like that. You may find a few parts you could do without."

"I'm not perfect. I've been selfish and petty. My thoughts were locked up in my selfishness. I think I'm free now. I'm trying to think broadly. I could have been nicer to lots of people."

"Not lots of men, I hope."

"I didn't have to slap one once. I could have been more tactful."

"He probably deserved it, the wolf . . . What are we doing tonight? We reach a dead end when we leave a restaurant, don't we? I won't sit in the sitting-room, however luxurious it is, at your boarding house, and you, being a nice girl, can't come up to the apartment where I live with four other men."

"It seems so strange that I have never seen where you live and you have not been to my house and met my family and had dinner."

He laughed. "On the contrary, the strangeness would be if I had . . . in these days!"

Her next words came in the middle of a breath. "Jud, do you wish I were—not a nice girl?"

His eyes quickened. "I may but—I'll never be able to forget that you are."

His eyes had a moody look then, she thought. You can love a man as much as this and still not know him completely. Love isn't knowing. You know so little. It's feeling.

"Is anything wrong, Temple?"

"No, nothing is wrong."

Jud put his hand over hers. "I had a date with another girl the night you were at Paula's. And oh, Lord, I was bored. I was bored because it wasn't you. I felt a thousand miles away from her. It wasn't any good at all. There's a challenge to you. Even though you probably think you were always sweet with me, there's always the possibility that you'll disagree with me . . . We've been sitting here so long they'll charge us parking fees."

Later, much later, sitting in the car outside her house he said, "But this is unfair to you, Temple. That's one of the blind alleys I find myself walking down. Because all of this, all of this that we feel, this force and magnetism leads but to one thing—good-bye. I shall be in the service God knows where. Oh, I know you'll say you'll wait and you'll write. But how do you know I'll come back the same if I come back at all, or if you'll still feel the same?"

"We can't answer that. All I can say is that I'll write and I'll wait."

"We'll still be together up to the last minute. Is that what you want? That's what I want, too. That's what I want very much . . . But we couldn't stop seeing each other if we tried."

Abby's door was open and Abby, her horn-rimmed spectacles low on her small nose, was sewing.

"Oh, come in, Temple. I've been missing you at dinner. It's too bad you had to pay for meals you don't eat here." She looked up at Temple standing in the doorway. "Miles has gone out of the country. He's . . . he's gone. I didn't cry. I look horrible when I cry . . . I thought I'd learn to sew at night."

Slowly, quietly, as she did everything Abby leaned forward and pressed her face against the bright, printed material. "I can cry now . . . No, don't come in . . . Please go away."

Temple went quickly to her room thinking how irreverently and irrelevantly it was to think at such a moment that Abby should always wear plain colors and not prints. Then she saw herself like Abby crying in her room after a tearless good-bye. If tears of women could win wars, they would be won before they had begun . . . She thought, "But Jud and I won't fight the war now. We'll fight time, wondering how much time we have left, how many more times we can see each other . . . But we can't hold back the spring."

Spring came prematurely that year, making buds burst into bloom before their customary time. As she walked to work, Temple saw and heard birds in the little grassy circles for which Washington is famous and saw trees she had always seen bare give shade to playing children. And the Japanese cherry blossoms drew thousands of flattering tourists from far and near.

When she looked back over the past months she saw them not as a series of episodes, but as one continuous episode which Jud dominated. Her work was routine now, as routine as the other necessary processes of living which did not include Jud. Ron's return from Florida was as methodical as his annual holiday there. He telephoned as he motored through regretting that he did not have time to see her. He asked her to come up for a visit, but set no specified time. Temple did not tell him that she had not been home because, after careful deliberation she had decided that her train fare was more needed at home than her presence there.

THEATERS

Musical Show.

Fred Astaire makes his first screen appearance in Mansfield since his bond-selling visit to the city as Bing Crosby's team-mate in "Holiday Inn," opening Friday at the Ohio. Irving Berlin's music fills the production and the cast includes Marjorie Reynolds and Virginia Dale with whom Astaire cuts some fancy terpsichorean figures. The plot concerns a song and dance trio, Crosby, Astaire and Miss Reynolds and revolves around Crosby's efforts to turn a Connecticut farmhouse into an inn open only on holidays. The music includes nine new songs and two old favorites, "Lazy" and "Easter Parade."

Rooney Comedy.

Mickey Rooney learns to play cricket in his most hilarious vehicle yet, "A Yank at Eaton," opening Saturday at the Madison. Mickey lands at the noted English school when his widowed mother marries an Englishman with a son played by Freddie Bartholomew. His experiences include taking a rap for Freddie, also innocent of any "crime," winning the steeplechase from the school bully and participating in other fun and action frolics. Tina Thayer plays Mickey's new film sweetheart and the cast includes Ian Hunter. "World at War" is the second feature.

Spy Comedy.

"The Lady Has Plans," Ritz attraction opening today, is a spy comedy with an European locale. Ray Milland and Paulette Goddard are teamed and the cast has Roland Young, Albert Dekker and Cecil Kellaway. Milland appears as an ace newscaster who tries to keep America posted from his station in Lisbon. Miss Goddard plays his assistant suspected by the enemy of having secret plans drawn on her back in invisible ink. "Sundown Jim," the second picture, stars "Jarrin'" John Kimbrough, ex-All American gridiron star.

The Madison theater will be converted into an "Asylum of Horrors" for the midnight stage show, Saturday night, that embraces a succession of spine-tingling features.

Dr. Silkini's presentation that invokes spirits and all kinds of uncanny phantoms will be climaxed when a Frankenstein monster makes its appearance and mingles with the audience.

In addition to the stage show a film bill will be presented topped by a thriller, "Shot in the Dark." Doors will open at 11:30 p. m.

PROFIT-TAKING CROPS UP IN MARKET TODAY

Prices Slightly Irregular With Woolworth Off and U. S. Steel Up.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—A little week-end profit-taking came into the stock market today and prices turned a shade irregular.

Up fractions were Bethlehem, U. S. Steel, International Harvester and Johns-Manville. Small declines were posted for Woolworth, Montgomery Ward and American Telephone.

Those watching merchandising shares for trend clues noted the Dun and Bradstreet survey which disclosed a general seasonal rise in retail distribution throughout the country during the current week. Wholesale districts reported strength in purchasing demand which in some instances could not be completely satisfied because of dwindling supplies.

Attention was given the Federal Reserve compilation which estimated the nation's department store sales for the week ended Sept. 26 exceeded those of the corresponding date a year ago by 5 per cent. The same year-to-year increase was registered in the preceding week.

4 ARRESTED ON SPEED CHARGES

Name of One Certified To Tire Rationing Board After Hearing.

Four drivers, including a young woman and a youth, 16, were arrested yesterday afternoon and evening on the first day of the federal government's stringent 35-mile limit fixed to insure greater fuel and rubber conservation.

State highway patrol members reported no speeding arrests and travelers noted a scarcity of motor vehicle traffic on the highways. Travel generally was at the new reduced maximum, observers said, one man reported he devoted two and one-half hours in driving from Cleveland to Mansfield, with no congestion noted anywhere.

Miss Anna J. Lloyd, 214 Euclid avenue, a stenographer, won the dubious honor of being the first speeder whose name will be certified from municipal court to the tire-gasoline rationing board under the new federal regulations. Miss Lloyd was arrested by Motorcycle Patrolman Richard Hecht on the charge of speeding 41 miles an hour yesterday evening on Highland avenue.

"Some motorists seem to think," Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch said today in imposing a fine of $10 and costs on Miss Lloyd's plea of guilty, "that the government's 35-mile limit applies only to the open highway. City ordinances for some time have established a 35-mile maximum within the city. All speeding and kindred offenses will hereafter be certified to the rationing board."

A 16-year-old Sturges avenue youth was cited to appear before Probate Judge Stuart H. Cramer today following his arrest by Hecht on the charge of speeding 42 miles an hour on Sturges avenue. The boy was operating the car on a temporary permit.

Harry T. Rosser, 436½ North Mulberry street, was arrested by Hecht on the charge of speeding 39 miles an hour on North Diamond street. Rosser, a taxi driver, crashed a red light at Fourth and Main streets, according to Hecht.

After crowding three autos off the roadway and nearly striking one car, according to the report of Hecht, Stanley Debro, Cleveland truck driver, was arrested on the charge of unsafe operation. He posted bond of $25 and his hearing set for tomorrow.

Debro's tractor and empty trailer was speeding 55 miles an hour on Lexington avenue when he was nabbed by Hecht. Other motorists had told the patrolmen that the carrier had imperiled their cars in its dash along the rural highway and into the city.

"I'm sorry, but I was in a hurry to get home," Debro is said to have told the arresting patrolman.

RUSSIAN RALLY DRIVES GERMANS OUT OF HOUSES

Reds Report Gains in Grim Battle to Hang on at Stalingrad.

the enemy from rooftops and chimneys.

The Russians struck at the Germans again in several areas northwest of Stalingrad and Izvestia said they destroyed 42 pillboxes, 39 firing points and several artillery batteries and killed 2,000 Germans at one point.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda reported the Germans were forced to abandon several hills and ravines. Another village was declared recaptured south of Stalingrad.

Action picked up on the northwestern front above Moscow. The midnight communique said a Red army formation beat off repeated Nazi infantry attacks and slew about 700 officers and men.

"On another sector of the front our units, as a result of active operations, pressed back the enemy somewhat and captured two mortars, 20 machine-guns, two wireless stations and other booty," it was announced.

Soviet marines were credited with killing some 500 invaders and capturing prisoners in the battle for the western Caucasus southeast of Novorossisk. Another 200 were declared to have fallen during a vain attack on a Red army position in the Mozdok region.

The Soviet information bureau said two German transports with a total displacement of 18,000 tons were sunk by Red navy craft in the Baltic sea.

Nazi Peace Bid to Vatican Reported

LONDON—(INS)—The Daily Mirror said today in an undated dispatch that Hitler has brought "certain peace proposals to the attention of the Vatican" and was attempting to have the Holy See transmit the proposals to Great Britain.

The story quoted reports reaching Switzerland from a usually reliable source. It added that Swiss "comment" was to the effect that the Vatican perhaps had kept silent regarding the deportation of Jews from France because "peace feelers" had actually been forwarded by Hitler.

However, informed quarters in London said they had no confirmation of the reported German peace proposals and it was reiterated that such proposals, if they were forthcoming, would be "turned down flat."

400 Bombers Batter Nazi Submarine Base

LONDON —(INS)— The German submarine base and shipbuilding center of Flensburg was heavily bombed during the night by estimated 400 British bombers, it was announced today.

Other objectives on the German Baltic coast also were hammered by the RAF.

An air ministry communique said 17 bombers failed to return from the attack.

Planes of the British coastal command meanwhile were battering Axs shipping off the Netherlands coast, the communique said.

Flensburg, in Schleswig-Holsten just below Denmark, was last hammered by the RAF eight days ago on Sept. 24.

Nazi radio reports asserted that the British assault on the north coast precipitated aerial dog fights when Luftwaffe planes challenged the raiders.

for them, taking the burden from the public.

They said in their answer that they have cared for more than 6,000 dogs since 1937, placing them in homes as far away as Colorado and Georgia. They said they have received "between 1,500 and 1,800" dogs this year and sometimes get as many as 100 telephone calls during a 24-hour period reporting stray dogs or asking for dogs.

Callihan contended in his action that the dogs made so much noise they kept the neighbors awake and the odor coming from their pens was "noxious."

left his office early this morning but it was understood there was a bombardment of similar calls received at City Hall.

Decision by the state board is scheduled for today in the Ringside case, together with a finding on similar charges against Nicholas Hergati, proprietor of the Blue Goose cafe in East Mansfield.

"I'd prefer that, in the future, you would not ask me any questions requiring answers of interest to The News-Journal," Locke told the reporter this morning.

The remark was smilingly spoken but obviously meant that the city's administrative officer does not consider it The News-Journal's business when it seeks to keep a large reading public informed on municipal affairs.

Police Chief Thomas M. Bell said yesterday that general complaints about the Ringside had been received by the police department but no specific charges made. Such matters, generally, are handled by inspectors of the state liquor board, Chief Bell explained.

Series Contenders Move East for 3rd Game of Classic

NEW YORK —(INS)— With the world's series tied at 1-1 and both teams en route today, baseball fans were preparing to welcome the New York Yankees when they arrive here for tomorrow's game at the Yankee stadium.

While rooters for the McCarthymen had indulged in wishful thinking which had the New York team taking the series in four straight, they were not overly disappointed by yesterday's uprising of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Pitchers for tomorrow's game have not yet been chosen but it is probable that either Spurgeon "Spud" Chandler or Atley Donald will take the mound for the Yankees while either Max Lanier or Ernie White will pitch for the Cards.

All reserved and box seats for tomorrow's game have been sold but 28,000 general admission and bleacher tickets will be on sale at the gates.

He is being held for McKeesport police.

true picture was "somewhere between" the two ideas presented by Bromfield and Kruse.

"There's no doubt about the selective service system being inadequate, but Kruse ought to have accurate figures showing the crop production," he said.

"The young men who are left on farms are essential ones who have remained there despite attractive wages in war plants, and to take them for the army would cripple farm production," the county agent added.

Bromfield was quoted as saying in Cleveland that the selective service law was "faulty, inefficient and downright impossible" which was "reducing the production of essential foodstuffs."

Kruse countered with a report of a survey that showed Ohio farm labor shortages resulted primarily from higher pay offered workers in war plants.

board without an interview with the applicant."

Kallmerton explained to The News-Journal that he referred to the plan of the board whereby members would take applications in Butler, Bellville, Lucas, and Lexington, pass preliminary judgment on them, and submit them to the board in Mansfield for final action.

"Every applicant for a tire should come before the tire board and present his argument," Kallmerton said.

Nelson Neff, chairman of the county rationing set-up, pointed out previously that the plan would save farmers and village residents a trip to Mansfield to apply for tires.

C. N. Shultz and John Gross are the other members of the tire rationing panel of the county rationing organization. Shultz is chairman of the panel. The rationing board has 12 members and is divided into four panels of three members each.

FDR CONSIDERS NEW INSPECTION OF WAR PLANTS

Would Visit Southeast and Central Areas Following Recent Surprise Trip.

Mr. Roosevelt said he found the finest kind of morale among the people—a willingness to sacrifice and to accept any necessary war measures. He described the spirit of the country as a whole as very much alive—except in the nation's capital.

Contending that the war spirit here was far less than in the rest of America, the president spread the blame for this among portions of congress, the press and radio, and administration officials.

Seeking to justify their service to the war effort, he said, numerous legislators pry into matters better left to military experts who know more about them. History shows, he remarked somewhat resignedly, that congressmen have been doing this since the Revolutionary war.

He accused a minority of the press and radio, chiefly commentators and columnists, of disseminating reports not based on fact and telling the people things that don't exist. This minority, he said, seems to be unfamiliar with the country, just as are some congressmen.

Mr. Roosevelt declined to mention any names.

As for government officials, he said some fifth rate executives or publicity seekers, whose points of view are not rounded out, make picturesque speeches or act out of a belief that their specialties are not receiving due emphasis. He recommended that they button their lips.

The kind of spirit needed in Washington, he said, was that which he learned about in some of the agricultural areas. As he traveled along, he said, he had heard how the local bankers, druggists, newspaper editors and children were going out into the fields and getting in the crops to help farmers unable to obtain labor.

In the war factories themselves he noted what he termed amazing numbers of women workers plying skilled trades. Plant managers informed him, he said, that in another year probably half the workers would be women.

Turning at one point to persons who had predicted his trip around the country would be of a political nature, the president said he was sorry to have to shock the readers of certain writers. But, he said, the only people remotely connected with politics whom he saw on the tour—and he said he did not talk politics with them—were 11 governors. He emphasized that he had not seen a single Democratic national committeeman or state chairman.

Some Republican members of congress immediately criticized the secrecy restrictions asked of the newspapers and radio, while Democrats said the voluntary censorship to protect the president was justified.

All of the stories about the trip prepared by three traveling reporters representing the Associated Press, the United Press and the International News Service were read by Mr. Roosevelt on the special train, and held for release here. He made no deletions, but added some touches by pointing out, for example, that one division he reviewed was one that he first knew in France in World war days.

The President left Washington on Sept. 17 and covered an average of 600 miles daily. Heading northwestward, he visited in turn the Chrysler tank arsenal and Ford Willow Run bomber plant at Detroit, the Great Lakes Naval Training station near Chicago, an Allis-Chalmers plant which makes various war equipment at Milwaukee, and a federal cartridge company factory at New Brighton, Minn.

Mr. Roosevelt stopped in at Farragut Naval Training station at Athol, Idaho, and at Fort Lewis, the Bremerton navy yard, an army embarkation port and the Boeing Flying Fortress plant in the Puget Sound area.

He inspected a reduction plant of the Aluminum Company of America at Vancouver, watched the launching of a 10,500-ton Liberty freighter 10 days after the keel was laid at the yard of Henry J. Kaiser's Oregon Shipbuilding corporation in Portland, and looked in on the Mare Island navy yard and army and navy depots on San Francisco Bay.

In a single day, the chief executive inspected a Douglas bomber plant at Long Beach, saw an old Spanish mission at San Juan Capistrano, dedicated the marine corps' new training station at Camp Joseph H. Pendleton, and looked in on a naval hospital, naval training center, marine base and Consolidated Aircraft bomber plant at San Diego.

The nation's principal pilot training center, at San Antonio, drew a presidential visit. Mr. Roosevelt viewed air corps activities at Kells, Duncan and Randolph fields and at an aviation cadet center, and he reviewed the 2nd infantry division, which he had known in world war days, at Fort Sam Houston.

It seemed to amuse the president to appear suddenly among the machines and workers and a war factory and find men and women gaping at him in astonishment. Most of them obviously had not been tipped off that the president of the United States was going to turn up among them in an open car.

The reasons for the secrecy became apparent with the disclosure that Mr. Roosevelt had entered a zone of actual military danger. That was in the far west, where he frequently was in sight of the sea.

At naval hospitals Mr. Roosevelt met men wounded in all the major battles of the Pacific. At Bremerton navy yard he saw wounds being healed on fighting vessels damaged at Pearl Harbor. At Mare Island navy yard he saw an American submarine with nine significant Japanese naval flags painted on her conning tower, symbols of that many victims, as well as a two-man Jap sub which failed in its mission at Pearl Harbor.

Three reporters, representing the three major news services—The Associated Press, United Press and International News service—were allowed to accompany the president and obtain first hand information on a wartime journey without historic precedent.

Byron Price, director of censorship, commented:

"No mandate or compulsion in law caused the publishers and broadcasters to keep this secret. They were guided purely by their own patriotism and caution in abnormal times. . . .

"The American press and broadcasters have never before made such a sacrifice of regular operations. Their act provides striking proof of the workability of voluntary censorship which must rest on the patriotism of press and broadcasting agencies."

gunning sweeps yesterday over the enemy supply line through the mountains. Gen. Douglas MacArthur said in a communique reporting the continued advance of the ground forces. All planes returned.

Boeing Flying Fortress and the Airacobras in a new series of coordinated attacks on the important Wairopi bridge on the other side of the mountains. A Japanese communications bottleneck, destroyed a big section of the span with demolition and incendiary bombs which set other sections of the bridge afire. The Japanese, trying desperately to keep the bridge open, had made temporary repairs only a few hours before.

Airacobras also cannonaded and machine-gunned barges and supply dumps in the beach area of Buna, the enemy base on the north coast.

Australian-built Beaufort fighters and Airacobras combined in an attack on communications and supply installations at the Salamaua base up the coast.

The Australians were now nearly 45 air miles and 66 trail miles from Port Moresby in the advance against the Japanese who had driven across the Owen Stanley range.

'GOODBYE JAPAN,' NEW VOLUME AT CITY LIBRARY

News Correspondent Relates Steps Which Brought Japs Into War.

"Goodbye Japan," an analysis of the steps which brought Japan into war against the United States authored by Joseph Newman, Tokyo correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, is among the new titles at the Mansfield Public Library.

Newman, associated for several years with The Japan Advertiser, bases his thesis on the fact that Japan can take her rightful place in the world only if the present dictatorship of emperor, big business and the military is absolutely destroyed.

A story of the cruelty, riot, panic and bravery that followed the capture of Hong Kong by the Japanese is set forth in another book, by Jan Hendrik Marsman.

"I Escaped From Hong Kong," tells what really happened in a city that fell to a people who look upon cruelty as a demonstration of superiority. The author is a Dutch-born American citizen with varied business interests in the Far East.

TIME AND THE TOWN by Mary Heaton Vorse combines autobiography with a descriptive history of Provincetown, Mass., its charm and changing life, from 1907 to 1941. Provincetown as a fishing village, as an artist's colony, as a vacation spot, but especially as the beloved home of the author is pictured, and many anecdotes of the great and near-great enliven the book's pages.

CARRY ME BACK by Rebecca Yancy Williams is a diverting and unsophisticated story of her own youth as Virginia's "Junior Miss," and it is as delightfully amusing and refreshing as her rollicking story of "Cap'n Bob" Yancy in the Vanishing Virginian.

Other non-fiction: SOVIET RUSSIA, Davies and Steiger; BRAZIL UNDER VARGAS, Lowenstein; REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR, Clark; DIVERSIONS AND PASTIMES, Abraham; ARGENTINA, White; NAVY RIVER, Felsen; FRENCH HOME COOKING, dePratz; FLUORESCENT LIGHTING MANUAL, Amick; DESIGN OF MODERN INTERIORS, Ford and Ford; METAL CRAFTS, Johnson and Newkirk.

THE SOUND OF AN AMERICAN by Stephen Longstreet is, primarily, a love story set against the background of the terrors and horrors and stern meaning of this war. In its story of an American who sees the death of France and who does not understand the simple strength of America until it is almost too late, it brings home the lesson that a nation dies before the final battle when its people stop believing in themselves.

AGENT EXTRAORDINARY by Spencer Bayne is a thrilling novel of international intrigue. A celebrated archaeologist and British agent in Syria disappears from the "diggings" at Baalbek, and the British embassy in Washington picks the dashing and erudite young American, Hendrick Van Kill, to discover what has happened to King and his documents. Disguised as King, Van Kill arrives at Baalbek to find the place swarming with German "tourists" and "archaeologists" — but with the help of a wealthy young English widow, he traps the ring leaders.

THIS FORTRESS by Manning Coles is the appealing story of Tom Langrish from the time of his stay at the romantic Schloss Rensburg in Germany, with the Countess Hildegarde during World War I—through his experiences in the quiet village of Westerly during World War II. As the months go by, he has a feeling that the past was repeating itself—and this feeling comes to a climax with his capture of a young German parachutist on the downs.

Other Fiction: THE DEVIL LOVES ME by Millar; TIMOTHY LARKIN by Hutchins; COARSE GOLD by Corle.

GET PERMITS TO BUY MACHINERY

Three Farmers Receive O. K. From Ration Committee To Make Purchases.

Three applications for permits to buy farm machinery had been approved today by the Richland county farm rationing committee which has just started functioning in the county.

The committee authorized W. C. Gump, Jackson township, and William Laser, Bloominggrove township, to buy combines, while Calvin Long, Crawford county farmer, was issued a permit to purchase a corn picker from a Shelby dealer.

Guy L. Taylor, chairman of the committee, said about 10 other applications were awaiting action by the rationing group Most applications are for permission to buy corn pickers, combines, tractors, and lime spreaders he said.

Applicants who obtain permits to purchase equipment must use them within 10 days after they are issued or they are no good, the committee warned. Applications are received at committee headquarters in the county AAA office on North Diamond street.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1942.

This year we must support with determination the war needs of our allies in addition to the usual community services. Particularly we are supporting the campaigns in those farsighted communities where war chests are established to meet all these needs in a single drive.—Philip Murray, president CIO.

Voluntary Censorship Exemplified

A CONVINCING example of the effectiveness of voluntary censorship is seen in the secrecy that surrounded President Roosevelt's 8,754-mile coast-to-coast tour of the nation, until the story was released yesterday after his safe return to Washington.

This trip included stops in many cities, with visits to navy bases, shipyards, war production plants, training centers, etc., and it was locally known, of course, when he was at each of these places, but there was no leak, either in print or by air, in regard to his movements, although this was what every newspaper would regard as a BIG STORY.

Representatives of the Associated Press, the United Press and the International News Service were along with the president on the trip, and all newspapers knew that the tour was in progress, from the time of its start two weeks ago.

But the safety of the president might have been jeopardized by public knowledge that he would be in a certain place at a certain time—or that he was on a train bound from one city to another. So it was kept secret—and it is gratifying to know that, when occasion justifies, this can be done.

Confidence Will Not Win the War

CONFIDENCE alone will not win the war. American confidence is based on things yet to be done. Hitler's confidence, which is probably just as great, is based on past accomplishments.

His most recent speech lacked none of the confidence in eventual victory that he had expressed on previous occasions, and, insofar as surface indications are concerned, it is too early to expect him to be frightened by Allied action or threats.

Hitler's scoffing comment on the much discussed second front was typical of the superiority complex he has developed as a result of early victories over weaker foes: "If I had enemies of military genius I could calculate where they may try it, but if I deal with military idiots I cannot really know where."

Except in its present setbacks in Russia, the Nazi military machine has, in the main, shown superiority over opposing forces, and it is this superiority that must be overcome before the United Nations can reach the turning point that will lead to final victory.

People of the United States, and of the entire western hemisphere, have thus far escaped actual hardships and suffering of war as these have been visited on England, Russia, China, and the occupied countries of Europe.

Whether this will continue into and through next year is doubtful. It may be realized before long that wages, hours, profits, politics, taxes, farm prices, rationing, and the like, are of secondary importance—that the preservation of America—and the lives and homes of its people—is the only thing that is vitally important right now.

Mayor's Letter To State Liquor Board

DEVELOPMENTS in connection with the state liquor board's inquiry in the case of a Mansfield night club charged with selling liquor to minors are made more interesting by Mayor Locke's introduction into the proceedings as a voluntary "character witness" for the accused.

It appears that the mayor's letter was to the effect that he had received no complaints or unfavorable reports about the night club which is under charges brought by the state liquor enforcement department—and this seems quite plausible, as, in view of a consistent record of non-enforcement of liquor and gambling laws it is unlikely that the mayor would be approached on such a delicate subject.

Complaints along this line would probably go to the chief of police, some member of the department, or directly to the state liquor board. Police Chief Bell is quoted as having said yesterday that he had received "a number of general complaints, but no specific charges" against the cited night club, while Harry E. Hawley, former Mansfield postmaster and now chairman of the state liquor board, also said yesterday, "The department of liquor control has had plenty of complaints about this place."

Mr. Hawley also made it clear that intervention of a mayor in behalf of an accused liquor licensee was "very rare," and that Mayor Locke's letter was volunteered, not requested by the board.

In view of recent action by the police department closing commercialized bingo games, it is also recalled that Mayor Locke's one-time edict on this illegal activity was that such gambling places shouldn't be operated "where they could be seen from the street," and that considerable alteration was necessitated at one West Fourth street location in order to meet the concealment requirement.

Considering the naivete displayed by Mayor Locke's letter to the state liquor board, it is just possible he doesn't know that the numbers racket is going along at full swing in Mansfield; that a race bookie place is being operated within two blocks of his office; that a half dozen lotteries masquerading as "guarantees" are making deep weekly cuts into money needed to meet family living expenses or to aid in carrying on the war, and that there is a city ordinance requiring night clubs to close at midnight.

Maybe the mayor doesn't know these things. If he doesn't, somebody should tell him—for, after all, he is the chief law enforcement officer of the city.

It is announced there'll be need for 200 million extra chickens this year, and one of the more urban congressmen has an idea that it might be well to pass a law reducing the hatching time from 21 days to 14 days.

More comment might be made on the rioting that occurred at Kulasekharapatnam, India, except that many newspapers are working shorthanded these days.

With the present shortage and high price of veal there's likelihood at any moment of finding some chicken in chicken salad.

They say that in a New York museum there's a fish that can walk—but it can't go up stairs . . . that's another story.

A good way not to win this war is for any economic bunch to try to get something out of it besides victory.

Hitler-Mussolini Break Looms

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WHAT HERR HITLER and Signor Mussolini talked about at their recent conference in Austria hasn't been publicized in the slightest detail.

There are pretty circumstantial reports, however, to the effect that Adolf is having trouble keeping his totalitarian family in order.

They are not mere guessers, either, but conclusions drawn on the strength of quite obvious indications. Assuming their correctness, the fair supposition is that Adolf arranged the meeting to make some fresh promises to Benito, or else to scare him into behaving just as the Nazi boss tells him to behave.

Of course the Duce originally hooked up with the Fuehrer, not on account of any personal liking he had for the latter, but in the hope for a profit for himself from the partnership.

Instead, everything that Adolf has scooped in he's kept exclusively for the Reich. It's true that Benito hasn't helped him much. He was quite a splurge during Fascism's early days, but presently petered almost completely out. Possibly the Nazi dictator considers him no longer worth bothering with.

In fact, one story is that Adolf plans to discard him altogether, and, as a substitute for him, take in Pierre Laval, with liberal Italian concessions to France.

Laval Has Some Fighters.

Pierre probably would, indeed, develop into a more competent deputy than Benito's proved to be. To be sure, he has the Free French against him. Nevertheless, he has a substantial bloc of followers, and these chaps, such as there are of 'em, are tolerably efficient fighters, whereas hardly any of the Italians are—not under Adolf's banner, that is to say; I don't imply that they won't fight if they feel like it.

Anyway, it's understandable that Benito, if he's heard these Laval rumors, as it's far more than likely that he has, must be in a dickens of a frame of mind over 'em.

Now, did he, maybe, arrange that conference to ask Adolf about it?

Or, perchance, did Adolf arrange it, to tell Benito what's coming to him and warn him to acquiesce peaceably—or else?

Another question arises.

Trust Laval?

Can the Fuehrer trust Pierre Laval? Pierre's an ambitious cuss, and uglier than the Duce has turned out to be. Can Adolf safely gamble on him, except very temporarily? And he'll have Gen. Charles de Gaulle to reckon with immediately.

Still another of Herr Hitler's calculations has gone wrong.

Not long ago he was bidding for the co-operation of Caudillo (meaning dictator) Francisco Franco of Spain. A totalitarian, like the Fuehrer, Francisco seemed rather friendly at the time. Now it appears that he's suspicious of Pierre Laval, too. Possibly he's heard that Pierre's been promised gains at Spain's expense, as well as at Italy's. Anyhow, he's acquiring evidently cold feet.

The Fuehrer unquestionably pledged the Caudillo Axis support in a Spanish grab of Portugal, a notion Francisco, at that juncture, was favorable to.

Latin America on Our Side.

Since then, though, Portugal's New World national offspring, Brazil, has entered the war on the democracies' side and most of Latin America has lined up the same way. It's too powerful a combination for the Caudillo safely to antagonize—certainly on commercial and, to some extent, on military grounds.

Besides, Spain is predominantly anti-Axis. Caudillo Franco won a pro-totalitarian civil war, but he won it skimpily and with oodles of Nazi-Fascists backing. He wouldn't have it today, and revolt is beginning to boil up under him already.

War Romance

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

By Mrs. N. R., Columnist for a Day.

WELL, I asked for it. Wanted to know what you thought about these hasty war marriages. And you certainly told me what and where and how, pronto! With many a dirty look. For Cupid is certainly having a field day in 1942 and most of you think it's perfectly ducky. Which I surely hope it is. But now and then there's a dissenting vote which is worth considering, and Mrs. N. R. is registering hers today.

"Dear Elsie:

"As a war bride of only a month I agree with your statement that such unions are risky and I only wish you had made your statement stronger, it might prevent many a heartache.

"I'm neither very young nor inexperienced, being 35 years of age, but the current glamor got me just the same. For the past six years I have had a deep and devoted companionship with a fine man. Then about three months ago we quarreled over a trifle and began to see each other seldom. Along comes the other man in army uniform, on a furlough.

"He was not a stranger. I had known him for about a year and been out with him on several occasions. In fact, he had proposed to me a couple of times when in civilian life and I had refused him, as I knew I did not love him. However, the uniform seemed to make a difference. Under the spell of adventure and excitement I imagined myself in love with him and we were married.

"Hardly was the ceremony over when I began to realize what I had done. The spell was broken. I had given myself to a man whom I didn't love and had lost the man who was my true mate. I can't tell you the bitterness of my disillusion. Now my husband has gone back to camp and as a war wife I seem to have no place in the world. If I loved the man whose name I bear I would, of course, feel entirely different. I am not blaming him. It was all my own fault. And I am trying not to worry or upset him, but I realize that I have made the mistake of my life.

"If I could only tell other girls—and there are so many of them—who rush into these hasty marriages, to wait until after the war, to make sure that they really care for the man. Of course, if there has been a long-standing attachment, such unions are justified. But even the sanest girl can have her head turned so easily by the sight of a uniform and the 'romance' of becoming an army bride. But there is no real romance in such marriages. It takes so much more than excitement and brief acquaintanceship to bind two hearts into one and build a home. It can never be done quickly nor can it be done by 'remote control.' People just face and share daily realities, disappointment as well as happiness, before they are tempered to marriage.

"You have the chance, Miss Robinson, to warn the girls of our nation. And the future of America may largely depend on such warnings. America will have a hard enough time without trying to build itself up again on broken homes and the dreadful debris of disillusionment and divorce."

Mrs. N. R.

Timely Editorial

Now's the Time to Start.

Already, items are cropping up aoubt affairs that are to be held before Nov. 22, when gasoline rationing becomes effective.

Doubtless the groups and individuals mentioned are only a few of those who are planning to make use of their automobiles for short or long trips that will be impossible when the use of gasoline is restricted.

Do these persons realize that it's just as important to save their tires now as it will be after Nov. 22? Has the advice of the Baruch committee, of Rubber Czar Jeffers and OPA Administrator Henderson fallen on deaf ears?

Self-rationing of mileage ought to start right now—today. The 20 miles used this week to go to a bridge club meeting may be needed a lot worse two years from now to take milady to her job in a war factory.—Akron Beacon Journal.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

FlimFlam.

Up to the minute United States slang, flimflam, so far as the experts can figure it out, probably is ancient Scandinavian, which long ago got into English dialects.

Tentatively offered for comparison are the Norwegian words flimska, mockery, and flimta, to flout, out of which flimflam easily could be fashioned in the sense of deception or trickery—such as distracting or confusing a person who is giving you change for a bill, with the thought that he will pass out more than the proper sum.

If this is so, then flimflam is a little more than, as one lexicographer calls it, "an onomatopoeic reduplication expressive of contempt"—it is a symbol of the immortality of language.

Among its early sponsors was John Heywood, who used it in 1546.

Interpreting the War News

Britain Unmoved By Hitler Threat That Air Attacks Will Be Renewed

—By DE WITT MACKENZIE

LONDON—Herr Hitler's boastful promise to his people that he will retaliate against Britain for the bombing raids on Germany finds John Bull quite unmoved and stoically reconciled to renewal of the Nazi war from the air.

There can be no question of der fuehrer's intention to resume his aerial hymn of hate, but there is considerable doubt how far he will be able to carry out his plans. He no longer is the mighty man he was before he tangled with the unconquerable Bolshevists, and his ability to conduct further wholesale bombings of Britain is contingent on several important things.

One of them is whether the Allies open up that second front about which he admits he is worried.

His declaration that he is ready to meet such an offensive is at least partly true, for his defensive preparations in western Europe have been obvious. Should such an Allied operation eventuate, Adolf might find himself far too busy meeting it to permit of bombing Britain.

At the moment, of course, he is fully preoccupied with his thus far unsuccessful effort to annihilate the Russian army of the south.

For months German efforts against Britain have been confined largely to nuisance raids. But John Bull is smart to anticipate that such a comparatively quiet condition won't continue indefinitely.

* * *

AT PRESENT, virtually all Hitler's air power, apart from essential home defense, is engaged in his now-or-never assault on Stalingrad and the Caucasus. One wouldn't expect him to withdraw any of this strength until he achieves all he can before winter calls a halt.

However, once the Caucasus show slows down, whither then?

It strikes me that he will be faced with numerous difficult problems now developing.

His airfleet is no longer the great weapon with which he started the war. He is short of warplanes, pilots, oil and gasoline. His first-line planes have been and are undergoing terrific wear and tear at Stalingrad. Before he can undertake any wholesale bombing of Britain, or any other extended engagement, he must go in for a thorough overhauling, and that will take time.

Also the Anglo-American air strength already in the British Isles is steadily growing. The Allies have superiority in the air over western Europe and are reaching for absolute supremacy.

Then, too, since Hitler slacked off on his bombing of Britain, defenses of these isles—both air and ground—have been vastly strengthened.

As I write I can hear the steady drone of Royal Air Force patrol planes as they swing over London—sweet music—and we presume that similar scouts are covering every strategic area. There have been great improvements in anti-aircraft defenses.

All this will take some beating.

Maybe Hitler will have other projects on hand at that time. He might decide to throw his strength into his now stationary offensive against Egypt. He might try to reach the Middle East by using his air force against Syria, bypassing Turkey.

* * *

NOW about that second front. It is interesting to discover that the British public is experiencing a lively hunch that the Allied high command is cooking up something.

I've encountered this feeling among military observers, too, on both sides of the Atlantic recently. There's nothing you can put your finger on, but its very persistance encourages belief that it isn't without substance. And now along comes der fuehrer to say he's seen the ghost.

And in view of the fact that both Britain and America have stated they are preparing an offensive and will get into action as soon as feasible, it's not illogical to think that something might pop somewhere any time.

"Second front" and western Europe have become synonomous in the minds of many of the public, but signs are that it will be safer not to try to pin expectations to that area or to any other specific zone at this time. There are several useful places where the Allies could strike.

Where the Allies may strike remains to be seen, but one thing is clear—if and when the Allied command decides to open a new front it will have the eager support of the people. That support is calculated to provide inspiration for action when it is wholly feasible. Maybe that's what Wendell Willkie had in mind when he said some of our military leaders may "need some public prodding."

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—The Capital in Wartime:

A few days ago, in the federal prison at Milan, Mich, a fifth columnist got what was coming to him—and he didn't like it.

He was a member of a religious sect opposed to war but this fellow carried things a little too far. He dodged the draft. He was caught, tried and sentenced to a term in the penitentiary. That apparently taught him nothing. He became a trouble-maker—the prison's No. 1 problem child. He rebelled at everything. He tried to incite the other prisoners to violence. He damned the U. S. A.

* * *

MILAN also is the "domicile" of a group of Nazis. Because of the danger of riots, the Nazis had been isolated from the other prisoners. Prison officials, finally at wit's-end with their fifth columnist, came to one conclusion: "All right, if he's such a Nazi lover, we'll just let him live with them."

He had been there some time when James V. Bennett, director of federal bureau of prisons, made a recent inspection tour at Milan. He came into the ward where the Nazis were held. A haggard fellow stepped out of the group.

In pitiful tones, he pleaded with Bennett. His wail went something like this: "Please, sir, get me out of here. I'll be good from now on. I can't stand being in with these dirty Germans."

He's back with the regulars now and at last report was a model prisoner.

EVERYTHING happens to Washington in wartime. The latest is "standsit" transportation. These are buses and trolleys with seats only 18 inches apart and at such height from the floor that you only bend your knees to plank down on the narrow ledge that is laughingly referred to as a seat.

The "standsitters" are a brainchild of the War Production Board. They increase the capacity of trolleys and buses by 20 persons.

Washington is taking them with good humor, for the most part. The most serious complaints come from fat people who can't wedge into the seats at all; shorties who can't reach them; and the bean poles who can't standsit without barking their shins.

A VISITING Nebraskan tells me that if you really want to find out about William M. Jeffers, the new rubber czar, go to North Platte where he was born.

The town has a Jeffers street and a Jeffers park. The little house where "Willie" Jeffers was born is a city shrine. A few years ago when it was threatened with demolition to make way for a new street, the city fathers had it moved and restored.

The only other North Platte hero who can match "Bill" Jeffers in eminence is one "Buffalo Bill" Cody.

A Farmer's Diary

Tent Caterpillars

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

IT WAS late last April that I first discovered tiny worms on a crotch of one of my year-old pear trees. They appeared dark, at first glance, but I examined one closely. It had peculiar varying shades of drab, brown and gray. On its sides were streaks of a pale blue with intervening light spots, and a long white line went down the back, while underneath it was a dirty brown. The close-set head was like a shiny knob.

I watched one feed for a while upon an opening bud, then crawl into the grayish, web-like nest that spanned a crotch, and rested motionless.

In another week, the web of silk had enlarged to take in a larger crotch, and I could plainly see the grayish tent from our kitchen window. Since the wind was cold, and I saw not a single worm had ventured out, I made a torch from a stick and a rag dipped in kerosene and quickly singed the nest and the wriggling mob inside it. The tent curled and melted down to semi-liquid, with the odor of horses' hoofs when a blacksmith fits on a heated shoe.

I scrutinized the yard and the shrubs that day for other nests and found none. Yet today I counted four tents on the honeysuckle, two on the wild cherry and three on our oldest, tallest apple tree. Each colony was large and had destroyed half the leaves on the limb where it hung.

ALONG the traveled road for many miles, I noticed that every walnut or hickory tree was webbed with heavy tents of forest tent caterpillars.

These differ in color from the orchard variety, and hatch just when the buds of oak, black walnut, ash and elm begin to open. They spread, unchecked by man's arsenic sprays or kerosene torches—since forests bear no food that man must cultivate—and one wonders how the woodlands can endure if they must produce two crops of leaves each summer season . . . and where are the birds and other insects that have so far kept these caterpillars in check, through all the centuries?

BUCYRUS — Crawford county farmers will have a smaller yield from their 1942 soy bean crop than they had last year although approximately 6,000 more acres were converted to that purpose, according to Russell L. Miller, Crawford county farm agent.

Groups of Bucyrus teachers have donned overalls and slacks each evening for a week and on Saturday and reported at the orchards. Hertzer says, "They are proving most efficient help."

LUCAS — Announcement has been made here of the marriage of Miss Mary Jane Smith and Corp. Merle H. Fulton, both of Lucas, at Alexandria, La., Sept. 18.

The nuptials were solemnized before the altar of the Redeemer Lutheran church in Alexandria by the Rev. Paul F. Stuecker, pastor of the church, who read the double ring marraige service. The bridal couple was unattended.

The bride, who is a daughter of Enoch Smith, graduated in 1936 from Lucas high school where she was a leader in musical and dramatic activities. For the past six years she has been employed as secretary by the Farmers Equity Exchange company in Lucas.

The groom is a son of James B. Fulton, Monroe township farmer. Following his graduation in 1934 from Lucas high school, where he was an outstanding athlete, he completed a course in Diesel operation in a Detroit engineering school. Until he entered military training about six months ago he was associated with his father in farming.

Corp. Fulton is now assigned to the 321st Glider Field Artillery corps stationed at Camp Claibourne, La, where he was recently designated to pursue special studies in radio communication.

CROP'S SMALLER

BUCYRUS — Crawford county farmers will have a smaller yield from their 1942 soy bean crop than they had last year although approximately 6,000 more acres were converted to that purpose, according to Russell L. Miller, Crawford county farm agent.

Early frost and late planting are the reasons for the decreased crop, Miller said. Average yield for the local crop is between 19 and 20 bushels per acre, according to Miller.

WILL YOU TRADE 3 MINUTES...
FOR EXTRA MONTHS (MAYBE EXTRA YEARS) OF MOTOR LIFE?
Before you change to any winter oil, stop in at your nearest Marathon Station. Take just three minutes to demonstrate to yourself that there is an entirely new, entirely different motor oil . . . an oil that will actually make your motor last half again as long as it would with ordinary oil. Isn't that worth while? Isn't that worth three minutes of your time?
PROVE TO YOURSELF THAT V.E.P. ALLOYED-OIL WILL MAKE YOUR MOTOR LAST 50% LONGER*
ENTIRELY NEW! ENTIRELY DIFFERENT! IT'S AN ALLOYED OIL

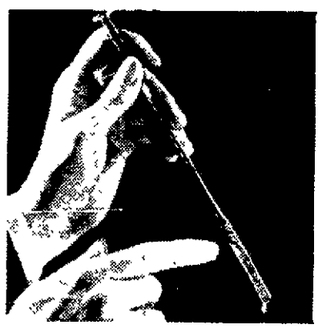
PROVE TO YOURSELF V.E.P. SAVES ENGINE WEAR. See how V.E.P.'s triple film strength protects against wear . . . how its magnetic-like film guards against "first-minute" damage by clinging to cylinder walls overnight, how V.E.P.'s cleaning action rids your motor of harmful sludge, carbon, varnish.


PROVE TO YOURSELF V.E.P. SAVES OIL. See how V.E.P. keeps valves and rings free, the slots in your oil rings open, prevents burning of excessive oil in the combustion chamber, conserves it instead.

PROVE TO YOURSELF V.E.P. SAVES GASOLINE. See how V.E.P.'s cleaning action keeps valves and piston rings free, gives a tighter seal, saves lost compression, turns gasoline into power instead of waste.
